He also praised Vice President Boakai for his distinguished service to our country – Liberia – and humanity.

Ambassador Sulunteh briefed the Vice President on activities at the Embassy, including the launch of the ECOWAS Biometric Passport in June 2012, and plans in the making to set up a desk for Diaspora Affairs, which is in keeping with the President's policy for the government to be actively engaged with the Liberian Diaspora. In response, Vice President Boakai thanked Ambassador Sulunteh and staff for the sacrificial services to our country and people through the able representation of the Republic of Liberia here in the United States. The Vice President also inspected the soon to be dedicated Deputy Chief of Mission residence located a block

Later on Friday night, Vice President Boakai attended a dinner during which he presided over the launch of the Gayah and Semera Fahnbulleh Foundation in the Washington, D.C. Maryland Metro Area. The well-attended dinner brought together an array of Liberians and friends of Liberia, with a focus on creating awareness and fundraising for humanitarian projects in Liberia.

The Gayah and Semera Fahnbulleh Foundation focuses on providing humanitarian assistance to Liberian rural dwellers, such as providing safe drinking water and improving sanitation.

Speaking at the event, Vice President Boakai indicated that there is a critical need for safe drinking water in many parts of Liberia. He added that even though Liberia has one of the highest rates of rainfall in the world, there is not enough safe drinking water for the general population.

The Vice President emphasized that though the government is making efforts to accelerate the pace of development in the country, there are still many areas of critical needs in the country, which is emerging from years of devastating civil crises.

Vice President lauded Liberians in the Diaspora for the steadfast support toward the development of their motherland, as exemplified by the efforts of Mr. and Mrs. Gayah Fahnbulleh in providing support to the less fortunate in rural Liberia. He expressed the need for Liberians at home and abroad to unite and work together for sustainable peace and progress of our country.

For his part, Mr. Gayah Fahnbulleh reaffirmed his family's commitment to the objectives of their foundation in contributing to the improvement of the conditions of rural dwellers in Liberia.
